Baby dies in hospital days after crash that killed mum, brother in Sydney
A two-year-old girl has died in hospital after being airlifted to Westmead Children's Hospital following a crash on the Hume Motorway at Menangle Park. The girl, who was not named, was the daughter of Katrina Sila, a 33-year-old woman who was killed along with her two-year-old son in the crash on Monday morning. Sila's baby daughter was taken to Westmead Children's Hospital but died in hospital days after the crash. The crash occurred on the Hume Motorway at Menangle Park, about 30km from Sydney. Sila was driving her car northbound when she attempted a U-turn and collided with a cement truck. The truck was heading southbound and was carrying a load of cement. The crash caused a major traffic jam on the motorway. Sila's car was crushed by the truck and she was killed. Her two-year-old son was also killed. Her baby daughter was taken to Westmead Children's Hospital but died in hospital days after the crash. The crash was the deadliest on the Hume Motorway since it opened in 1980. The Hume Motorway is one of the busiest roads in New South Wales.
